Program

Are you tired of hearing about formative assessment? Why are we still talking about it? Formative assessment is not just about an unweighted category in our grade book, but rather the fundamental way we organize our classrooms. Formative assessment can help guide teachers' teaching and students' learning.

Who cares about formative assessment? We all should!

This learning opportunity is being offered through a grant from Alberta Education.

Presenters

Missy Steeves

Missy Steeves is a teacher with Sturgeon Public, currently on secondment to the Alberta Assessment Consortium, a not-for-profit education partner in the province, focused on everyday assessment to support student learning. She has taught elementary and junior high, most recently focusing on junior high social studies and English language arts. Missy also works as an association instructor with the Alberta Teachers'

Association. Additionally, Missy is completing her doctoral studies in Adult Education. Currently, Missy is away from her classroom, working with teachers as a field services facilitator with AAC. Missy is passionate about working with teachers and is looking forward to using what she's learned during her secondment when she returns to her classroom.
